

ABSTRACT

A life preserver assembly includes a substantially planar main body portion formed from a buoyant material. A separation means is provided for defining at least one life preserver in the main body portion. The separation means permits the life preserver to be removed from the main body portion. A method for storing a life preserver is also disclosed.